Key Texts for Latin American Sociology

Edited by Fernanda Beigel
Contents

About the Editor ix
About the Contributors x
Acknowledgments xxi

INTRODUCTORY STUDY
Latin American Sociology: A Centennial Regional Tradition
Fernanda Beigel (Argentina)

PART ONE FOUNDING PROBLEMS 31

1 Founding Problems and Institutionalization of Sociology in Latin America 33
Jorge Rovira Mas (Costa Rica)

2 Alberto Guerreiro Ramos (Brazil)
A Critical Introduction to Brazilian Sociology: Canned Sociology versus Dynamic Sociology 47
Comment by João Maia (Brazil)

3 Orlando Fals Borda (Colombia)
Theoretical–Practical Experiences: General Working Guidelines on Participatory Action Research (PAR) 57
Comment by Juan Ignacio Piovani (Argentina)

4 Aníbal Quijano (Peru)
Of Don Quixote and Windmills in Latin America 64
Comment by Cláudio Costa Pinheiro (Brazil)
5 Edelberto Torres Rivas (Guatemala–Costa Rica)
On the Pessimism in the Social Sciences
Comment by Sergio Villena Fiengo (Costa Rica)

6 Elizabeth Jelin (Argentina)
The Foundations of a New Issue: Gender,
Human Rights and Memory
Comment by Teresa Valdés Echenique (Chile)

PART TWO HISTORICAL AND CONTEMPORARY DEBATES

7 Understanding Historical and Contemporary Debate in Latin American Sociology: Enlightening Paths
Raquel Sosa Elizaga (Mexico)

8 Sergio Bagú (Argentina–Mexico)
Building Theory
Comment by Pablo de Marinis (Argentina)

9 René Zavaleta Mercado (Bolivia)
The Struggle for Surplus
Comment by Óscar Vega Camacho (Bolivia)

10 Arturo Escobar (Colombia–US)
Development (Again) in Question: Trends in Critical Debates on Capitalism, Development and Modernity in Latin America
Comment by Irene Piedrahita Arcila (Colombia)

11 Bolívar Echeverría (Ecuador–Mexico)
The ‘American’ Modernity (Keys to Its Understanding)
Comment by Márqara Millán (Mexico)

PART THREE SOCIAL STRUCTURE
AND INEQUALITIES

12 Inequality, Inequalities
Nadya Araújo Guimarães (Brazil)

13 José Carlos Mariátegui (Peru)
The Problem of Race: Approaching the Issue
Comment by José-Carlos Mariátegui Ezeta (Peru)

14 Florestan Fernandes (Brazil)
The Weight of the Past
Comment by Antonio Sérgio Alfredo Guimarães (Brazil)

15 Rodolfo Stavenhagen (Mexico)
The Dynamics of Inter-ethnic Relations:
Classes, Colonialism and Acculturation
Comment by Francisco Zapata Schaffel (Mexico)

16 José Nun (Argentina)
Marginality and Social Exclusion (Fragments)
Comment by Gabriel Kessler (Argentina)

17 Marina Ariza and Orlandina de Oliveira (Mexico)
Households, Families and Social Inequalities in Latin America
Comment by Brigida García (Mexico)

PART FOUR IDENTITIES, ACTORS AND SOCIAL MOVEMENTS

18 Latin American Perspectives on Social Movements Research
Breno Bringel (Brazil)

19 Silvia Rivera Cusicanqui (Bolivia)
Ch‘ixínakas utxwa: A Reflection on the Practices and Discourses of Decolonization
Comment by Maristella Svampa (Argentina)

20 Eder Sader (Brazil)
Comment by Maria da Glória Gohn (Brazil)
21 Virginia Vargas (Peru)
Latin American Feminisms and Their Transition to the New Millennium (A Personal Political Reading) 319
Comment by Susana Rostagnol (Uruguay)

22 Enrique de la Garza Toledo (Mexico)
Trade Union Models in Latin America,
Before and After 338
Comment by Patricia Collado (Argentina)

PART FIVE  STATE, SOCIETY AND POLITICS 353

23 Politics, State and Society in Latin American Sociology:
A Partial Introduction 355
Manuel Antonio Garretón (Chile)

24 Suzy Castor (Haiti)
The Secular Roots of a Difficult Nation-building 371
Comment by Patricia Funes (Argentina)

25 Ernesto Laclau (Argentina–UK)
The Populist Turn and the Center-Left in Latin America 382
Comment by Paula Biglieri (Argentina)

26 Guillermo O’Donnell (Argentina–US)
On Certain Aspects of the Crisis of the State 389
Comment by Maria Hermínia Tavares de Almeida (Brazil)

27 Bernardo Sorj (Uruguay–Brazil)
Political Activism in the Era of the Internet 404
Comment by Carlos Ruiz Encina (Chile)

Index 423
INTRODUCTION TO PART FIVE

23

Politics, State and Society in Latin American Sociology: A Partial Introduction

Manuel Antonio Garretón (Chile)¹

As has been widely recognized, let’s recall that scientific sociology was born in this region to understand and intervene in the question of the transformation of society – what economics would call development (Trindade, De Sierra, Garretón, Murmis and Reyna, 2007). But a transformation of society does not depend on natural forces but on human action, and for that reason, from a sociological perspective, it must address politics as a central element and, in contemporary times, the fundamental agent for its direction, the State. Accordingly, sociology in these latitudes was born as sociology of development and as political sociology,² occupying with some exceptions the role that political science had occupied in other societies.

The paradox is that, nevertheless, in the big paradigms of the time associated with the foundation of sociology, politics and the State were assigned the role of a dependent variable. Thus, from the approach of modernization, the processes of secularization, rationalization and differentiation would make it possible to overcome the intrusions of politics and the State in social and economic life – and democracy as a regime would be the effect of such modernization. From the perspective of Marxist views and dependency, State and politics were the result of economic processes and the capitalist feature of development (Marini, 1969). It would be unfair to consider that there were no perspectives that emphasized the more autonomous character of politics and the State to understand that the same insertion in the world capitalist system allowed a diversity of development paths or that political processes had been developed involving a certain autonomy of politics and the State.³ In fact, studies on Nation-State building, thematically explored by Suzy Castor in this section of the book, point to its central role in the planning processes or in the relationships